Golfers, Learn By Watching the Experts on the Greens

By "Straight Drive."

THE average golfer is too much engrossed in the development of his own game. In many cases his progress towards proficiency would be much more rapid if he would occasionally walk around and watch experts play their shots. I think it better to look at them in play than to play with or against them, because in one case the mind is free to study cause and effect, and in the other the mind is always occupied with the necessities of one's own ball in its course from tee to cup.

In this country we have far too few professional maters. If each of our golf clubs would make an annual appropriation of a few hundred dollars to be hung up in cash prizes for a few professional competitions they would provide the best sort of educational facilities for their members. In England, particularly, men like Vardon, Taylor, Braid and Ray are in great demand for exhibition matches. There money prizes besides mere glory of achievement, encourage them to attain and maintain a high degree of proficiency. In this country aside from open championships, our pros do not have sufficient hard, grueling matches to keep them at the top of their games.

The duffer or average player who has the opportunity of seeing the pros in action against one another, and is ambitious to acquire a higher degree of skill, gets inspiration from the exhibitions and seeks the friendly advice and lessons from the pros to how some particular shot or shots were played.

Baseball and Prizefight Gossip

JACK Coombs will not be able to pitch for some time because of a hot liner off Oldring's bat, which struck him on the knee while batting practice at Cleveland. Coombs was rounding into form nicely and Mack expected to start him in a few days, but the latest injury will keep him out of the game for at least two weeks more.

Sam Langford, who is so anxious to get a bout with Gunboat Smith, has been signed to meet Porky Flynn, in a 12-round bout at Boston, on August 25. Langford will probably defeat Flynn as he is a hard puncher, and is too clever for the Boston boy.

Mike Finn, former National League player and manager of the Mobile Southern league club, has been deposed as head of the Sea Gulls. Finn piloted the Mobile club to the top of the Southern league this season, and has sent several players to the major circuits. Instead of $10,000 as supposed, the Mobile stockholders only received $1000 for Demaree.

Frank Moran has started training for his bout with Al Palmer, to be staged at New York early in September. If Moran meets with success with Palmer, he is entitled to a crack at Gunboat Smith. Palmer figures the same way, and O'Rourke's white hope will begin training soon.

Benny Chavez has received offers from several eastern promoters for dates in the near future. Milwaukee promoters have wired inducements to meet Matty McCue, and Chavez has been offered a match in New York, which he may accept. He is scheduled to meet Frankie Burns, at Denver, on August 29.

KELLY QUILTS IN HIS FIGHT AT LAS VEGAS

Denver Welterweight Claims He Broke His Wrist During Battle With Stanley Yankum, of Dallas.

East Las Vegas, N. M., Aug. 26.—Clint Kelly, a Denver welterweight, quit in the seventh round of his bout with Stanley Yankum, a Dallas light-weight, here last night. Up to that time Kelly, despite Kelly's advantage in weight had easily outboxed and outpointed him.

C. F. Lambert, a state mounted policeman, was at the ring side and, it is said, he had instructions from the governor to stop the fight at the end of the 10th round, the promoters having planned a 20-round contest. The sudden ending of the bout made interference unnecessary.

Indications are that president Tebeau virtually obtained Johnny Corridon when he allowed Vaughn to go to Chicago. Low Richie is a good pitcher and in this league should, with proper support, prove a winner. His game against Columbus shows his

Some are inclined to criticize the local magnate for trading Morgan, the only winning hurler on the staff, to Cincinnati, and Vaughn. But that is unfair if he can strengthen his club by these trades.

Fans are Eager For the World's Series

Comparisons Show the Athletics Will Have a Shade Over the Giants if These Two Teams Meet—Timely Batting Will Decide the Winner.

By MONTY.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—In view of the fact that the Athletics and Athletics are conceded almost universally now as certain to meet in the next world's series, fans are beginning to turn their attention to the question of how the two teams compare.

The series this year has an extra element of attraction in that old rivals are meeting again, aggregations that met only two years ago. Though of the 1911 players remain to make the tilt practically a renewal of the same duel.
